

New Hire Onboarding Program

Building sales readiness through company context, product clarity, responsible communication, and a structured 90-day path.

CORE ONBOARDING WORKSHOP

Why onboarding matters

A consistent foundation reduces ramp-up time and builds company-level alignment.

EuroBridge is a high-pressure financial sales environment. New hires need more than orientation—they need a reliable path to performance readiness.

1. Standardize the first 90 days

Create a common foundation before product-line specific training.

2. Connect learning to sales readiness

Help new hires understand products, process, and client communication expectations.

3. Build trust in company growth

Show that development is supported by the company, not only by an individual manager.

Today's learning outcomes

01

Describe EuroBridge's business model and European market focus

02

Identify five representative product lines and basic client use cases

03

Describe the standard EuroBridge sales process

04

Recognize responsible risk and compliance communication

05

Translate culture into observable sales behaviors

06

Complete a personal 30/60/90-day onboarding action plan

The onboarding journey

A 3-hour core workshop, followed by manager-supported 30/60/90 development.

Core principle

Start with client context, communicate responsibly, and build professional habits from Day 1.

Success signal

New hires know what to learn, what to practice, and how progress will be reviewed.

EuroBridge at a glance

European market products, China-based night shift, performance-driven sales.

Business model

Financial sales organization focused on European market products.

Work rhythm

Sales coverage aligns with European market hours: 8 p.m. to 4 a.m. CST.

Client context

Clients expect timely information, clear explanations, and responsible communication.

New hire readiness means understanding not only what EuroBridge sells, but how sales work should be done.

Why European market hours matter

The work schedule is a business design choice, not just an operational detail.

Reflection prompt

What routine will help you stay effective during the night-shift sales rhythm?

Five product lines

A simple product map for Day 1 understanding.

Energy Commodities

Volatility, macro events, energy supply

Precious Metals

Uncertainty, safe-haven logic

Foreign Exchange

EUR, GBP, currency movements

Equity Indices

Broad European market exposure

Fixed Income

Yield, rates, income-oriented needs

Product understanding framework

New hires do not need to master every product on Day 1. They need the right questions.

What market is this product connected to?

3

What risk should be communicated?

What client need may it serve?

What should I ask before discussing it?

Instructor cue

Use this framework before any product-specific training or client conversation practice.

Activity: Product-to-client matching

Match client situations to the most relevant product category. Explain your reasoning without making a recommendation.

Client is concerned about European energy supply issues

Energy Commodities

Client follows EUR/USD movement closely

Foreign Exchange

Client wants exposure to broad European market performance

Equity Indices

Client asks about income-oriented products

Fixed Income

Debrief

Matching is a discovery exercise, not a product recommendation. Strong sales starts from client context.

EuroBridge sales process

A shared process creates consistency before personal style.

New hire reminder

Do not pitch too early. Discovery and follow-up quality often matter more than product features.

Common new hire mistakes

Use the process to prevent avoidable errors in early client conversations.

Pitching before discovery

Not confirming understanding

Over-explaining product features

Weak or delayed follow-up

Avoiding risk discussion

Not documenting client concerns

Practice prompt

For each step of the sales process, identify one thing that could go wrong.

Risk & compliance communication

Responsible language is part of professional sales.

Financial products involve uncertainty.
New hires must communicate opportunity and risk with clarity, balance, and responsibility.

Do not guarantee

Avoid claims that imply certainty or no downside.

Do not pressure

Avoid urgency language that bypasses client suitability.

Do not oversimplify

Balance product value with relevant risk.

Three communication principles

Be clear

Use simple, accurate language.

Be balanced

Explain opportunity and risk together.

Be responsible

Avoid guarantees, pressure, or misleading claims.

Design note for learners

Compliance is not separate from sales; it is how trust is protected during sales.

Risky vs responsible language

Rewrite high-risk sales statements into professional client language.

“This product is very safe.”

“This product may fit certain goals, but it still involves market risk.”

“You should buy now before it goes up.”

“We can review the current market context and discuss whether it fits your needs.”

“There is almost no downside.”

“Potential return and risk should both be considered before making a decision.”

Activity

Rewrite: “This is a great opportunity. You should not miss it.”

Culture in action

Culture becomes credible when it is visible in daily sales behaviors.

Professionalism

Clear, responsible, respectful communication

Accountability

Follow up on commitments and document conversations

Learning Orientation

Ask questions, seek feedback, reflect on sales experience

Collaboration

Share useful insights and learn from peers

Long-Term Thinking

Build client trust beyond short-term pressure

Your 30/60/90-day path

The workshop begins the journey. The first 90 days make growth visible.

First 30 Days

Foundation

Company, products, compliance basics

Quiz + manager check-in

Days 31–60

Practice

Sales process and client communication

Role play + observation

Days 61–90

Readiness

Guided client follow-up and review

Simulation + readiness review

Activity: Draft your action plan

Use this table to prepare for your first manager check-in.

Stage	What I need to learn	What I need to practice	Support I need	Evidence of progress
First 30 Days
Days 31–60
Days 61–90

Pair-share

Tell a partner one question you will ask your manager during your first check-in.

After the workshop: manager-supported onboarding

New hire ownership + manager reinforcement = performance readiness.

New hire

Complete product guide, ask questions, observe calls, update action plan

Manager

Hold check-ins, observe sales behavior, provide feedback, assess readiness

Buddy/peer

Share examples, explain team routines, support informal learning

The goal is to make development visible, supported, and consistent across product teams.

Key takeaways

What every new hire should remember after today.

- 1 Understand the company before selling the product.
- 2 Start with client needs, not product features.
- 3 Communicate opportunity and risk responsibly.
- 4 Use the sales process as your guide.
- 5 Treat the first 90 days as a structured growth path.

Next steps

From orientation to supported performance readiness.

- 1 Meet with your manager for the first onboarding check-in
- 2 Complete product knowledge follow-up and compliance check
- 3 Observe experienced sales conversations and document learning
- 4 Use the sales process checklist in early client practice
- 5 Update your 30/60/90 plan after manager feedback

At EuroBridge, successful sales performance begins with understanding the client, communicating responsibly, and building professional habits from Day 1.
